"The Gamble" – Canh Bạc

Thursday, 12 February, 7:30 PM – 9:00 PM

(Vietnamese with English subtitles)

(Veteran Vietnamese Director Lưu Trọng Ninh will be with us for discussion/ Q&A after the screening)

During the early "Đổi Mới" (renovation) period a 'social realism' style emerged in Vietnamese cinema. Faced with new challenges and opportunities, the movie companies turned their attention away from heroic war stories and began searching for new subjects. 'The Gamble' was one of the first films to fairly honestly portray the social problems of gambling, prostitution and drugs in a non-ideological manner.

Mai, a poor student too proud to ask for government assistance to continue her studies, decides to work at her aunt's roadside food stall. "I need money desperately", she says, "Lots of money." But she soon discovers that working as a waitress on a northern truck route is not only poorly paid, but also demeaning. Enter Chiến, a truck driver with mysterious cargo. Mai decides that she can earn enough money to continue school if, acting as his wife, she helps him through the police checkpoints. A relationship develops, but her innocence is shattered. Ultimately, Chiến's urge to gamble not only threatens their relationship, but also leads Mai into great danger.

Melodrama, yes, but with characters and situations that many common people could identify with.

Famed actress Thu Hà plays Mai, and Đôn Dương plays Chiến the corrupt truckdriver who takes Mai under his wing. 'The Gamble' was written by Vietnamese poet and screenwriter, Nguyễn Thị Hồng Ngát and film was shot entirely on location in the mountainous regions of Northern Vietnam.
